Student Teacher Agreement Form

Each year, the McKeever Environmental Learning Center works with student teachers from various colleges and universities. The center has a working relationship with these institutions of higher learning and has agreed to accept and work with their student teachers. While student teaching at the McKeever Center, you must realize that you are representing your college/university, the McKeever Center and yourself.

The McKeever Center has regulations, procedures, policies and practices that apply to you as a student teacher. You must become familiar and agree to adhere to these at all times while student teaching at the McKeever Center. It is your responsibility to become aware of our expectations, regulations, rules and conduct. Many of these are found in McKeever's Student Teaching Manual. In addition, it is your responsibility to become familiar and agree to all regulations, procedures, policies and practices of your college/university. These can be found in your college/university student teaching handbook.

As a student teacher at the McKeever Center, I understand and agree to the principles governing the student teaching experience. Further, I understand and agree that if my conduct or performance as a student teacher is not compatible with McKeever's regulations, rules, policies and/or procedures, my assignment may be terminated by the McKeever Center and/or your college/university.
